ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S
MOTION FOR SUMMARY
JUDGMENT AND DENYING DEFENDANT'S CROSS-MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

25 Re: ECF Nos. 19, 24

26 Plaintiff C.B.¹ challenges the final decision of Defendant Martin O'Malley, Commissioner 27 of Social Security (the Commissioner),² denying her application for disability insurance benefits 28 under Title II of the Social Security Act. Both parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction (ECF Nos. 9, 10) and moved for summary judgment. ECF Nos. 19, 24. Having considered the parties' briefing, and for the reasons discussed below, C.B.'s Motion for Summary Judgment is GRANTED, the Commissioner's Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment is DENIED, and this matter is REMANDED for further proceedings.

29 30 I. BACKGROUND

31 C.B. is a 50-year-old woman who suffers from several medical and psychological 32 impairments, including chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS) related to chronic Bartonella and Babesia 33 infections, fibromyalgia, cognitive dysfunction, anxiety disorder, complex post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), and depression. ECF Nos. 12-4 at 2–3, 12-11 at 10.³ Her medical records contain numerous provider assessments that consistently describe C.B.’s symptoms in association with her CFS and fibromyalgia diagnoses. See, e.g., ECF No. 12-8 at 41, 481, 505. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) describes CFS as a “disabling and complex illness,” symptoms of which include severe fatigue, post-exertional malaise, sleep disturbance, impaired memory or ability to concentrate, pain, and dizziness. See CDC, What is ME/CFS?, <https://www.cdc.gov/me-cfs/about/index.html> (last reviewed Mar. 21, 2023). It defines fibromyalgia as “a condition that causes pain all over the body (also referred to as widespread pain), sleep problems, fatigue, and often emotional and mental distress.” See CDC, Fibromyalgia, <https://www.cdc.gov/arthritis/basics/fibromyalgia.htm> (last reviewed May 25, 2022). C.B. was diagnosed with CFS as early as 2018, with symptom onset in 2015–2016, and officially diagnosed with fibromyalgia sometime in 2020. ECF No. 12-8 at 481, 486.

On October 22, 2018, C.B. filed an application for disability insurance benefits. ECF No. 12-3 at 18. The claim was initially denied on January 4, 2019, and upon reconsideration on May 16, 2019. Id. In October 2020, C.B. underwent a pacemaker implantation to treat her irregular heart palpitations and potentially her severe fatigue. ECF No. 12-14 at 70. There were no complications, and in November 2020, C.B. reported improvement in her chest discomfort symptoms and was found to not be pacemaker dependent, although she continued to report daily fatigue in the months after the procedure. ECF Nos. 12-7 at 130–31, 12-13 at 341, 393.

After the denial upon reconsideration, C.B. filed a written request for a hearing and the administrative law judge (ALJ) held a telephonic hearing on June 22, 2021. ECF No. 12-3 at 18. C.B. testified and vocational expert Luis Mas testified before the ALJ. Id. On August 31, 2021, the ALJ issued a written decision finding that although C.B. is unable to perform any past relevant work because of her medical and psychological impairments, considering her age, education, work experience, and residual functional capacity, there are jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national economy that C.B. can perform. Id. at 33–34. As to her RFC, the ALJ found that she can

1 perform sedentary work as defined in 20 C.F.R. § 404.1567(a), which requires in part “the ability 2 to lift/carry up to 10 pounds occasionally and 5 pounds frequently,” “stand and walk up to 2 hours 3 cumulatively in an 8-hour workday,” “occasional climbing of ramps and stairs,” and “frequent 4 stooping, kneeling, crouching, and crawling.” Id. at 25–26. Based on the vocational expert’s 5 testimony, the ALJ found that C.B. can perform the requirements of “unskilled” and “sedentary” 6 occupations such as “lens gauger,” “addresser,” and “circuit board assembler.” Id. at 34.

7 C.B. appealed the ALJ’s decision to the Appeals Council on October 21, 2021. ECF No.
8 12-5 at 104–08. The Appeals Council issued a denial of the Request for Review on August 19, 9 2022. ECF No. 12-3 at 2–8. At that point, the ALJ’s decision became the final decision of the 10 Commissioner pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g).

11 II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

12 Under Title II of the Social Security Act, disability insurance benefits are available when 13 an eligible claimant is unable to “engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any 14 medically determinable physical or mental impairment . . . which has lasted or can be expected to 15 last for a continuous period of not less than twelve months.” 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A). To 16 determine a claimant’s eligibility for benefits, the ALJ engages in a five-step sequential evaluation 17 process. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)(1).⁴ To establish disability, the claimant bears the burden of 18 showing (1) that they are not working; (2) that they have a severe physical or mental impairment 19 or a combination of impairment(s) that is severe; (3) that the impairment(s) meet or equal the 20 requirements of a listed impairment; and (4) that their RFC precludes them from performing their 21 past relevant work. Id. § 404.1520(a)(4). At step five, the burden shifts to the Commissioner to 22 show that the claimant has the RFC to perform other work that exists in significant numbers in the 23 national economy. Hoopai v. Astrue, 499 F.3d 1071, 1074 (9th Cir. 2007). If the Commissioner 24 conclusively finds the claimant “disabled” or “not disabled” at any point in the five-step process, 25 he does not proceed to the next step. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)(4).

26 Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), a district court has authority to review the Commissioner’s

1 decision to deny disability benefits to a claimant. “The ALJ is responsible for determining 2 credibility, resolving conflicts in medical testimony, and for resolving ambiguities.” Ahearn v.
3 Saul, 988 F.3d 1111, 1115 (9th Cir. 2021) (quoting Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th 4 Cir. 1995)). The district court’s role is “to ensure that the [ALJ’s] decision was supported by 5 substantial evidence and a correct application of the law.” Ludwig v. Astrue, 681 F.3d 1047, 1051 6 (9th Cir. 2012). “‘Substantial evidence’ means more than a mere scintilla, but less than a 7 preponderance, i.e., such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to 8 support a conclusion.” Robbins v. Social Sec. Admin., 466 F.3d 880, 882 (9th Cir. 2006). The 9 Court must “consider the entire record as a whole, ‘weighing both the evidence that supports and 10 the evidence that detracts from the Commissioner’s conclusion.’” Lingenfelter v. Astrue, 504 F.3d 11 1028, 1035 (9th Cir. 2007) (quoting Reddick v. Chater, 157 F.3d 715, 720 (9th Cir. 1998)).
12 “Where the evidence can reasonably support either affirming or reversing the decision, [this 13 Court] may not substitute [its] judgment for that of the Commissioner.” Parra v. Astrue, 481 F.3d 14 742, 746 (9th Cir. 2007).

15 III. DISCUSSION

16 C.B. raises four challenges to the ALJ’s decision. First, she argues that the ALJ erred in 17 her evaluation of C.B.’s subjective symptom testimony. Second, C.B. argues that the ALJ erred in 18 her evaluation of the medical opinion evidence. Third, C.B. argues that the ALJ erred in the 19 evaluation of the lay witness testimony, specifically, the testimony of C.B.’s partner, Beth.
20 Fourth, C.B. argues that the ALJ erred when it came to her findings at step five of the sequential 21 evaluation process. Separately, C.B. also challenges the Appeals Council’s failure to consider a 22 letter from Dr. Christopher R. Snell, dated September 14, 2020.

23 A. C.B.’s Subjective Symptom Testimony

24 With respect to the second step in the ALJ’s five-step sequential evaluation process, C.B.
25 has challenged the ALJ’s evaluation of her subjective testimony regarding the severity of her 26 impairments. This particular challenge requires the Court to address the applicable standard for 27 evaluating the claimant’s credibility. In the Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, the 28 Commissioner does not cite to the “clear and convincing reasons” standard when analyzing the

1 ALJ's evaluation of C.B.'s subjective symptom testimony. Instead, the Commissioner argues that 2 "[u]nder the substantial evidence standard of review, the Court should uphold the ALJ's findings 3 [as to C.B.'s subjective symptom complaints]." ECF No. 24 at 10. C.B. claims that the 4 Commissioner improperly focuses on the "substantial evidence" standard of review "in order to 5 avoid the much higher standard of review that this circuit demands when evaluating a claimant's 6 symptoms and testimony." ECF No. 25 at 2. This Court is bound by Ninth Circuit precedent and 7 applies the "clear and convincing reasons" standard, as explained below.

8 The Ninth Circuit has "established a two-step analysis for determining the extent to which 9 a claimant's symptom testimony must be credited." Trevizo v. Berryhill, 871 F.3d 664, 678 (9th 10 Cir. 2017). "First, the ALJ must determine whether the claimant has presented objective medical 11 evidence of an underlying impairment which could reasonably be expected to produce the pain or 12 other symptoms alleged." Id. (quoting Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1014–15 (9th Cir.
13 2014)). If the claimant meets this requirement and there is no evidence of malingering, "the ALJ 14 can reject the claimant's testimony about the severity of her symptoms only by offering specific, 15 clear and convincing reasons for doing so. This is not an easy requirement to meet: The clear and 16 convincing standard is the most demanding required in Social Security cases." Id. To satisfy the 17 "clear and convincing reasons" requirement, "[g]eneral findings are insufficient; rather, the ALJ 18 must identify what testimony is not credible and what evidence undermines the claimant's 19 complaints." Brown-Hunter v. Colvin, 806 F.3d 487, 493 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting Reddick, 157 20 F.3d at 722).

21 In weighing the claimant's credibility, the ALJ may consider many factors, including "(1) 22 ordinary techniques of credibility evaluation, such as the claimant's reputation for lying, prior 23 inconsistent statements concerning the symptoms, and other testimony by the claimant that 24 appears less than candid; (2) unexplained or inadequately explained failure to seek treatment or to 25 follow a prescribed course of treatment; and (3) the claimant's daily activities." Tommasetti v.
26 Astrue, 533 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2008) (quoting Smolen v. Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1284 (9th 27 Cir. 1996)). The ALJ's reasons also must be supported by substantial evidence in the record.
28 Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 F.3d 947, 959 (9th Cir. 2002).

1 Here, the ALJ found at step two of the five-step sequential evaluation process that C.B. has 2 several, medically determinable severe impairments, including, inter alia, CFS, fibromyalgia, 3 PTSD, depression, and general anxiety disorder. ECF No. 12-3 at 20. The ALJ made no finding 4 that C.B. was malingering and found that C.B.’s “medically determinable impairments could 5 reasonably be expected to cause the alleged symptoms.” Id. at 33. Therefore, the ALJ could 6 reject C.B.’s “testimony about the severity of her symptoms only by offering specific, clear and 7 convincing reasons for doing so.” Trevizo, 871 F.3d at 678.

8 The ALJ gave several reasons for rejecting C.B.’s symptom complaints, none of which 9 meet the “clear and convincing reasons” standard.

10 1. C.B.’s Daily Activities

11 The ALJ rejected C.B.’s testimony as to her CFS and fibromyalgia symptoms in part 12 because she “reported a relatively full range of daily activities” such as “preparing simple meals, 13 doing small amounts of laundry, cleaning, doing the dishes, vacuuming,” etc. ECF No. 12-3 at 33.
14 But “[d]aily activity may be grounds for an adverse credibility finding only if it meets the 15 threshold for transferable work skills or contradicts [the p]laintiff’s testimony,” and “[a]ctivities 16 such as ‘[h]ouse chores, cooking simple meals, self-grooming, paying bills, writing checks...as 17 well as occasional shopping outside the home, are not similar to typical work responsibilities.’” 18 Baig v. Kijakazi, No. 21-CV-01839-HSG, 2023 WL 3688453, at *8 (N.D. Cal. May 26, 2023)
19 (quoting Diedrich v. Berryhill, 874 F.3d 634, 643 (9th Cir. 2017)). The Ninth Circuit has 20 repeatedly recognized that “many home activities are not easily transferable to what may be the 21 more grueling environment of the workplace, where it might be impossible to periodically rest or 22 take medication.” Fair v. Bowen, 885 F.2d 597, 603 (9th Cir. 1989), superseded on other grounds
23 by 20 C.F.R. § 404.1502(a). The ability to “periodically rest” at home in between daily activities
24 is especially important for individuals with CFS and fibromyalgia. See Reddick, 157 F.3d at 722 25 (holding that the ALJ erred in finding that the claimant’s daily activities indicated an ability to 26 work where activities “were sporadic and punctuated with rest,” which is consistent with CFS).

27 C.B.’s statements regarding her daily activities do not contradict her testimony as to her 28 CFS and fibromyalgia symptoms. She testified that her pain is “inconsistent” and “some days”

1 her back pain is so bad that she can “barely even stand up.” ECF No. 12-3 at 69. C.B. referred to 2 these bouts of pain as “episodes” that sometimes happen close together and can go on for several 3 days. Id. She also completed a Social Security Administration (SSA) Function Report on April 4 22, 2019, which states that although she tries to go outside daily, she often must stay inside to rest 5 for two to four days a week because she is “too fatigued and sick.” ECF No. 12-7 at 78. C.B.
6 reported that she must do household chores “one at a time” and “spread them out over longer 7 periods of time.” Id. at 77. Her grocery shopping trips are usually only thirty minutes, including 8 driving and shopping time. Id. at 78. Although C.B. may engage in the daily activities 9 highlighted by the ALJ, these are “sporadic and punctuated with rest,” which is to be expected for 10 individuals with CFS. Reddick, 157 F.3d at 722; see also Hatcher v. Apfel, No. C98-03453WHA, 11 1999 WL 1029858, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 9, 1999) (“[T]he limitations in [the plaintiff’s] activities 12 reported at the hearing, to her doctor, and on disability forms are consistent with each other and 13 with the symptoms of CFS.”)

14 The Commissioner argues that “[e]ven where [a claimant’s daily] activities suggest some 15 difficulty functioning, they may be grounds for discrediting the claimant’s testimony to the extent 16 that they contradict claims of a totally debilitating impairment.” ECF No. 24 at 12 (quoting 17 Molina v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 1104, 1113 (9th Cir. 2012)). But C.B. is not alleging that her CFS or 18 fibromyalgia are “totally debilitating impairment[s]” that render her completely immobile and 19 unable to engage in typical daily activities such as cooking, cleaning, and grocery shopping.
20 Molina, 674 F.3d at 1113. Her statements and testimony are that she can only engage in such 21 activities sporadically when she has ample opportunity to rest and recover. “[D]isability claimants 22 should not be penalized for attempting to lead normal lives in the face of their limitations.” 23 Reddick, 157 F.3d at 722. Moreover, “[e]ven more prolonged undertakings might be consistent 24 with [CFS as it] is characterized by periods of exacerbation and remission.” Id. (internal quotation 25 marks and citation omitted); see also Lee v. Kijakzi, No. 222CV00068JDPSS, 2023 WL 2751985, 26 at *5 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2023) (holding that the plaintiff’s “activities of daily living do not 27 contradict her symptom testimony or allegations of total disability” where the plaintiff had a CFS 28 diagnosis and characterized her activities as “performed on a very limited basis, often with 1 assistance, and only as allowed by her condition") (internal citation omitted).

2 2. Pacemaker Implantation

3 Another reason the ALJ gave for rejecting C.B.'s symptom testimony with respect to her 4 CFS, anxiety disorder, PTSD, and depression was her October 2020 pacemaker implantation. The 5 ALJ noted how the pacemaker was successfully implanted without any complications, resulted in 6 some symptom improvement, and C.B. was ultimately not deemed "pacemaker dependent." ECF 7 No. 12-3 at 32–33. Yet the ALJ also acknowledged the "rule-out nature" of the pacemaker (id. at 8 23), as documented in C.B.'s medical records, where C.B. was informed by her doctor that the 9 "pacemaker would not address many of her symptoms," only her irregular heart palpitations and 10 "potentially" her fatigue. ECF No. 12-14 at 70.

11 C.B.'s doctor's uncertainty about the ability of the pacemaker to address many of her 12 symptoms aligns with the medical community's general understanding of CFS, which is 13 notoriously difficult to diagnose and requires that medical providers attempt to exclude other 14 possible medical causes. See Social Security Ruling, SSR 14-1p: Titles II and XVI: Evaluating 15 Claims Involving Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, 2014 WL 1371245, at *2 (Apr. 3, 2014) ("In 16 accordance with the CDC case definition of CFS, a physician should make a diagnosis of CFS 17 only after alternative medical and psychiatric causes of chronic fatiguing illness have been 18 excluded") (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); Reddick, 157 F.3d at 724 (noting that 19 the claimant met the CDC's criteria for the diagnosis of CFS and had "underwent years of testing 20 and examination to rule out other possible illnesses.") The fact that the pacemaker implantation 21 "ruled out" severe cardiac impairments does not discredit her symptom testimony concerning the 22 severe fatigue and pain attributable to CFS and fibromyalgia. If anything, it bolsters the evidence 23 of CFS as an impairment by showing that the cause of her fatigue is not due to a cardiac condition.

24 Notably, the ALJ did not elaborate as to how C.B.'s pacemaker implantation is a "clear 25 and convincing reason" for rejecting her symptom testimony as to her psychological impairments, 26 such as her anxiety disorder, PTSD, and depression. See Fischman v. Astrue, No. CV 08-7720-
27 RC, 2010 WL 477600, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2010) (holding that the ALJ's "grossly conclusory" 28 finding as to the plaintiff's contentions with respect to the severity of her symptoms, which "the

1 ALJ did not further elaborate on,” did not “provide a clear and convincing reason for rejecting 2 plaintiff’s testimony.”) Finally, the ALJ also observed that “[o]ther than the pacemaker implant, 3 the claimant has not required extensive, invasive or inpatient treatment.” ECF No. 12-3 at 30.
4 “[T]o the extent the ALJ suggests plaintiff’s credibility is suspect because she has received only 5 conservative treatment for her illness, this is not a clear and convincing reason for rejecting her 6 subjective complaints in this case since no definitive treatment for [CFS] exists.” Nelson v.
7 Astrue, 610 F. Supp. 2d 1070, 1077–78 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (citing Reddick, 157 F.3d at 727); see also Baig, 2023 WL 3688453, at *8 (noting that the ALJ cited no basis in support of the suggestion that the plaintiff “would need to have been hospitalized or admitted to inpatient care.”)

10 3. Mental Status Evaluation Findings

11 The ALJ also rejected C.B.’s statements as to her CFS, anxiety disorder, PTSD, and 12 depression symptoms in part because “the mental status evaluation findings by treating 13 psychiatrist Dr. Lee were consistently and invariably benign.” ECF No. 12-3 at 33. Dr. Lee 14 described C.B. as “pleasant and cooperative, with logical thought processes, normal attention, 15 normal concentration, and intact memory.” Id. at 28.

16 However, the medical records that the ALJ cites to tell a different story. There are notes 17 from Dr. Lee alongside her mental status findings describing significant mental health symptoms 18 that are consistent with C.B.’s psychiatric diagnoses. See, e.g., ECF No. 12-9 at 218 (“Reports 19 triggered sometime in June – memories of trauma, couldn’t sleep well... Jumpy/startle, low stress tolerance, ongoing, can only focus on 1 thing at a time.”) “Narrative sections” in mental health 20 records can “provide pertinent details inconsistent” with a “normal” or “intact” mental status records examination. De La Cruz v. Kijakazi, No. 20-CV-05852-MMC, 2022 WL 1556411, at *8 (N.D.
21 Cal. May 17, 2022). As C.B.’s treating psychiatrist, Dr. Lee’s statements “must be read in context 22 of the overall diagnostic picture [s]he draws.” Holohan v. Massanari, 246 F.3d 1195, 1205 (9th 23 Cir. 2001). Findings that C.B. was “pleasant and cooperative” or presented with “logical thought 24 processes” during their sessions are not inconsistent with C.B.’s statements to Dr. Lee as to the 25 severity of her mental health symptoms.

26 To the extent the ALJ suggests that Dr. Lee’s “benign” mental status evaluation findings

1 are inconsistent with C.B.’s CFS symptom testimony, the Court notes that Dr. Lee is C.B.’s 2 treating psychiatrist, and never purported to diagnose or evaluate her CFS and/or fibromyalgia.
3 See Astir F. v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., No. C21-1350-MAT, 2022 WL 2192922, at *4 (W.D. Wash.
4 June 17, 2022) (holding that the “ALJ did not provide clear and convincing reasons for 5 discounting [the p]laintiff’s testimony based on” doctor’s statement that her chronic pain was 6 stable on medication where the doctor “did not treat [the p]laintiff specifically for pain 7 management.”); 20 C.F.R. § 404.1527(c)(5) (more weight is given to the medical opinion of a 8 specialist about medical issues related to their area of specialty). And Dr. Lee’s finding that 9 C.B.’s concentration was sometimes “normal” and her memory “intact” during their twenty-10 minute or so psychiatric sessions (see, e.g., ECF No. 12-9 at 222) does not discredit her testimony 11 as to cognitive difficulties significant enough to disrupt day-to-day activities.

12 4. Neuropsychological Evaluations

13 In terms of C.B.’s statements regarding her chronic cognitive dysfunction, the ALJ found 14 them contradicted by the fact that she scored “on both neuropsychological evaluation[s] in June 15 2018 and September 2020 in the high average and even superior range of intellectual functioning 16 on neuropsychological testing.” ECF No. 12-3 at 32. Though the September 2020 17 neuropsychological evaluation from Maya Yutsis, PhD found that “C.B.’s premorbid level of 18 intelligence was estimated to have been high average,” Dr. Yutsis went on to conclude that “[t]he 19 extent and severity of her cognitive deficits was more likely than not of sufficient severity to 20 interfere with her ability to work in her occupation due to attention/concentration and processing 21 speed deficits and executive deficits.” ECF No. 12-8 at 498–99; see also id. at 500 (attributing 22 C.B.’s cognitive deficits in part to the “well documented and most persistent cognitive difficulties 23 in the domains of attention and processing speed in persons with CFS....”) In the 2018
24 neuropsychological report from Elinor S.W. Dorsett PhD, Dr. Dorsett opined that C.B.’s 25 “cognitive symptoms are most likely due to secondary factors such as fatigue and mood 26 symptoms. Both chronic fatigue and mood symptoms, both individually and in concert, are 27 known to negatively disrupt cognitive functioning throughout daily life as well as impacting 28 overall quality of life.” Id. at 518. Thus, C.B.’s measured high average intelligence does not

1 contradict the evidence of her cognitive difficulties due to fatigue and mood symptoms.
2 Considering Dr. Yutsis's and Dr. Dorsett's neuropsychological reports in their entirety, it is clear 3 both doctors found there was objective medical evidence to corroborate C.B.'s cognitive deficits—4 as a result of her chronic fatigue symptoms—that affect her daily functioning, which is consistent 5 with C.B.'s testimony and statements. The ALJ improperly "cherry-picked" from Dr. Yutsis's and 6 Dr. Dorsett's reports yet ignored their conclusions as to how C.B.'s severe fatigue significantly 7 disrupts her cognitive functioning. See Holohan, 246 F.3d at 1207 (concluding that the ALJ's 8 basis for rejecting the treating physician's medical opinion was not supported by substantial 9 evidence because the ALJ "selectively relied on some entries ... and ignored the many others that 10 indicated continued, severe impairment.") Additionally, with respect to C.B.'s CFS and 11 fibromyalgia symptom testimony, the ALJ's preference for "objective clinical findings" like the 12 neurological testing over C.B.'s self-reports "contravenes this circuit's case law, which holds that 13 such reasoning 'runs counter to the [CDC's] published framework for evaluating and diagnosing 14 CFS.'" Lee, 2023 WL 2751985, at *4 (quoting Reddick, 157 F.3d at 726); see also Rau v.
15 Comm'r of Soc. Sec., No. 14-CV-03534-DMR, 2016 WL 705983, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 23, 2016)
16 (explaining that CFS is diagnosed based on self-reports and by ruling out other possible causes).

17 Accordingly, for all the above reasons, the Court finds that the ALJ failed to provide clear 18 and convincing reasons supported by substantial evidence for rejecting C.B.'s symptom testimony, 19 particularly her statements regarding her limitations due to CFS and fibromyalgia.

20 B. Medical Opinion Evidence

21 C.B. challenges the ALJ's evaluation of medical opinion evidence from Drs. Christopher 22 R. Snell., Hector Bonilla, Steven Harris, Jennifer Sugden, S. Hanna, and D. Brodsky. ECF No. 19 23 at 4–15. "[A]n ALJ cannot reject an examining or treating doctor's opinion as unsupported or 24 inconsistent without providing an explanation supported by substantial evidence." Woods v.
25 Kijakazi, 32 F.4th 785, 792 (9th Cir. 2022). In reviewing medical source opinions, an ALJ must 26 "articulate ... how persuasive" he or she finds "all of the medical opinions" based on several 27 factors. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(b). The ALJ must address the two most important factors:
28 supportability and consistency. Id. Supportability is "the extent to which a medical source

1 supports the medical opinion by explaining the ‘relevant … objective medical evidence.’” Woods, 2 32 F.4th at 791 (quoting 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(c)(1)). Consistency is “the extent to which a 3 medical opinion is ‘consistent … with the evidence from other medical sources and nonmedical 4 sources in the claim.’” Id. at 792 (quoting 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(c)(2)).

5 An ALJ may, but is not required to, explain how other factors were considered, including 6 the medical source’s relationship with the claimant, the length and purpose of the treatment 7 relationship, the frequency of examinations, and the source’s specialization. 20 C.F.R.
8 § 404.1520c(b)(2), (c). If the ALJ finds that two or more medical opinions about the same issue 9 are equally well-supported and consistent with the record but are not exactly the same, then the 10 ALJ will have to articulate how it considered the other factors listed. 20 C.F.R.
11 § 404.1520c(b)(3). An ALJ satisfies the “substantial evidence” requirement by “setting out a 12 detailed and thorough summary of the facts and conflicting clinical evidence, stating his 13 interpretation thereof, and making findings.” Garrison, 759 F.3d at 1012 (quoting Reddick, 157 14 F.3d at 725). “The ALJ must do more than state conclusions. He must set forth his own 15 interpretations and explain why they, rather than the doctors, are correct.” Id.

16 1. Dr. Snell

17 Dr. Snell performed a Cardiopulmonary Exercise Test (CPET) over two days from March 18 9–10, 2020, to gauge C.B.’s “functional capacity and fatigue” by determining “peak oxygen 19 consumption,” in connection with her CFS diagnosis. ECF No. 12-16 at 23, 26–32. The ALJ 20 determined that Dr. Snell’s findings are “unsupported, conclusory, vague, and not persuasive,” in 21 part because they “appear to include only two sentences with conclusion of work preclusions 22 while another note describes a severely positive stress test with episode of overall depletion...” 23 ECF No. 12-3 at 31. According to the ALJ, Dr. Snell’s findings “do not correlate with [C.B.’s]
24 grossly normal stress tests and cardiopulmonary findings, contained in the records from Kaiser 25 Hospital and Stanford Health Care.” Id.

26 Dr. Snell’s medical opinion is not as vague and conclusory as the ALJ describes it. The 27 aforementioned “two sentences” are actually the introductory paragraph in the CPET Evaluation 28 Report summarizing Dr. Snell’s overall findings. ECF No. 12-16 at 26. He otherwise explains the

1 test procedure and results and includes a more detailed summary of his findings in the CPET 2 Evaluation Report’s conclusion. Id. at 26–33. Dr. Snell also describes various aspects of the 3 CPET results in substantial detail. See, e.g., id. at 28 (“Peak oxygen consumption was only 66– 4 65% of predicted and below the 17.5 ml kg⁻¹ min⁻¹ [SSA] criteria for disability in cases of 5 cardiovascular disease...”) The CPET Evaluation Report is also accompanied by a four-page 6 letter from Dr. Snell further clarifying the CPET results and opining on C.B.’s functional capacity.
7 Id. at 22–25. Thus, the ALJ incorrectly characterized Dr. Snell’s description of the positive CPET
8 results as a “note,” when in reality, Dr. Snell more than adequately supported his medical opinion 9 by explaining in detail the relevant and objective medical evidence underpinning the CPET results.
10 See Woods, 32 F.4th at 791.

11 Moreover, a CPET is an SSA-approved method to establish the existence and severity of a 12 medically determinable impairment because of CFS. See SSR 14-1p, 2014 WL 1371245, at *5 13 (identifying “abnormal exercise stress test” as a laboratory finding that can be relied upon by the 14 SSA in its disability determination); Clemons v. Berryhill, No. 18-CV-00578-EDL, 2019 WL 15 3852495, at *17 (N.D. Cal. June 27, 2019) (remanding in part because the ALJ “may not be 16 current on the international standards for incorporat[ing] CPET evaluations into assessments of 17 CFS,” and noting that the ALJ should “reconsider the potential for using CPET results to diagnose 18 CFS in this case.”) The medical community’s recognition of the CPET as a reputable tool in 19 assessing CFS is at odds with the ALJ’s finding that Dr. Snell’s opinion is “unsupported,” when 20 Dr. Snell otherwise explains the “relevant ... objective medical evidence” underlying the CPET 21 data. Woods, 32 F.4th at 791 (quoting 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(c)(1)); see ECF No. 12-16 at 22–23, 22 27.

23 The ALJ also determined that Dr. Snell’s medical opinion did not “correlate” with records 24 from Kaiser Hospital and Stanford Health Care, which contain “grossly normal stress tests and 25 cardiopulmonary findings.” ECF No. 12-3 at 31. The Kaiser Hospital records show that C.B.
26 underwent exercise stress tests in February 2017 (ECF No. 12-10 at 15–17) and September 2019 27 (ECF No. 12-9 at 454–56). The February 2017 stress test results were “adequate” and showed 28 “normal heart rate response to exercise,” (ECF No. 12-10 at 15), while the September 2019 stress

1 test demonstrated “[g]ood exercise tolerance” but the results were “inconclusive...due to 2 borderline ECG changes.” ECF No. 12-9 at 457. The Stanford Health Care records show that 3 C.B. underwent a “tilt test” which was performed by neurologist Dr. Safwan Jaradeh. Id. at 477–
4 79. That test showed “mild but significant orthostatic changes,” yet otherwise normal
5 cardiopulmonary results. Id. at 478. The Stanford Health Care records also document C.B.’s 6 October 2020 pacemaker implantation, and the fact that medical providers found she displayed 7 normal cardiac functioning after its implantation. ECF No. 12-12 at 2–4, 482–84.

8 As an initial matter, according to the SSA, there are no “specific laboratory findings that 9 are widely accepted as being associated with CFS” and “standard laboratory test results in the 10 normal range are characteristic for many people with CFS,” therefore, “they should not be relied 11 upon to the exclusion of all other clinical evidence in decisions regarding the presence and 12 severity of a [medically determinable impairment].” SSR 14-1p, 2014 WL 1371245, at *4; Lee, 13 2023 WL 2751985, at *4 (“[A] general litany of negative lab tests does not undermine plaintiff’s 14 CFS allegations, since ‘[t]here is no blood test or other objective laboratory test for [CFS]’”) 15 (quoting Salomaa v. Honda Long Term Disability Plan, 642 F.3d 666, 677 (9th Cir. 2011)). If 16 anything, as noted above, “abnormal exercise stress tests” like the CPET are a specific type of 17 laboratory finding explicitly identified by the SSA as being associated with CFS. SSR 14-1p, 18 2014 WL 1371245, at *4. To the extent the ALJ suggests that “normal” cardiopulmonary test
19 results invalidate C.B.’s CPET results, this is contrary to SSR 14-1p and with the CDC’s 20 “published framework for evaluating and diagnosing CFS.” Reddick, 157 F.3d at 726. In this 21 respect, when evaluating the consistency of Dr. Snell’s opinion with the medical evidence of 22 record, the ALJ erred in relying on evidence that is not actually inconsistent with Dr. Snell’s 23 findings.

24 As for the “grossly normal stress tests,” the ALJ did not explain how they are inconsistent 25 with C.B.’s CPET results. Dr. Snell opined that the CPET is different than the September 2019 26 exercise stress test because the latter “is well known to overestimate peak oxygen consumption,” 27 and is also a one-time test that did not involve follow up with C.B. “to inquire about possible post-28 visit symptom exacerbation.” ECF No. 12-16 at 22–23. According to Dr. Snell, “[t]he severity of 1 ME/CFS symptoms can fluctuate during the day, from day to day, and throughout the illness,” and 2 “[s]ymptoms may not occur for hours or even days after the triggering event,” thus, “healthcare

3 providers may not see patients when their symptoms are most severe.” Id. at 24. The ALJ failed 4 to address this part of Dr. Snell’s opinion. As such, she failed to describe “the extent to which” 5 Dr. Snell’s medical opinion is or is not “consistent … with the evidence from other medical 6 sources and nonmedical sources in the claim,” as she was required to do by the regulations.
7 Woods, 32 F.4th at 792 (quoting 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(c)(2)).

8 According to C.B., “[a]ssuming, arguendo,” that Dr. Snell’s medical opinion and the 9 Kaiser Hospital stress test results were both “equally supported… the ALJ had an obligation to 10 articulate the other persuasiveness factors in paragraphs (c)(3) through (c)(5) of [20 C.F.R.
11 § 404.1520c]. This the ALJ failed to do.” ECF No. 19 at 8. These factors include the length of 12 the treatment relationship, frequency of examinations, medical source specialization, etc. 20 13 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(b)(3). The Commissioner did not address this argument in the Cross-Motion 14 for Summary Judgment. But the Court is not convinced that Section 404.1520c(b)(3) applies in 15 this instance, given that the February 2017 and September 2019 stress test results are noted in 16 C.B.’s medical records and not necessarily a medical “opinion.” Nevertheless, the Court need not 17 determine whether the ALJ erred in her failure to evaluate the other persuasiveness factors, given 18 that the ALJ’s explanation for finding Dr. Snell’s opinion unpersuasive based on the mandatory 19 factors of supportability (Section 404.1520c(c)(1)) and consistency (Section 404.1520c(c)(2)) is 20 deficient and not supported by substantial evidence.

21 2. Dr. Bonilla

22 Dr. Bonilla, a chronic fatigue specialist at Stanford Health Care, opined in a letter dated 23 January 20, 2021, that C.B.’s “history and symptoms are consistent with” CFS, and recommended 24 that until C.B.’s “fatigue has measurably improved…[she] refrain from any exertion, both physical 25 and cognitive… [Her] treatment plan is to limit activities, including walking, lifting, bending, and 26 similar physical exertion and cognitive tasks that require focus.” ECF No. 12-12 at 16, 19. The 27 ALJ found Dr. Bonilla’s letter not persuasive because it only reflects C.B.’s limitations since 28 December 2, 2020, which is when he first began treating C.B. ECF No. 12-3 at 31. The ALJ also

1 found that Dr. Bonilla’s opinion is “vague as to the degree of exertional capacity remaining,” and 2 what C.B. “could do now and for any continuous 12-month period.” Id. Finally, the ALJ found 3 that “Dr. Bonilla appears to overly rely upon the subjective complaints” of C.B. Id.

4 The ALJ did not make any findings regarding the mandatory supportability and 5 consistency factors when evaluating the persuasiveness of Dr. Bonilla’s medical opinion. 20 6 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(c)(1)–(2). Instead, she emphasized Dr. Bonilla’s two-month treatment 7 relationship with C.B. ECF No. 12-3 at 31. Length of the treatment relationship is a factor that 8 the ALJ can consider, but she is not required to explain this factor in all cases, as she is required to 9 do for supportability and consistency. See Lilita H. v. Kijakazi, No. 21-CV-04063-JSC, 2022 WL
10 4225395, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 13, 2022) (“The ALJ must explain how he considered 11 supportability and consistency, may explain how he considered the relationship factors, and is not 12 required to explain the other factors”) (emphasis added). The fact that Dr. Bonilla and C.B. had a 13 two-month treatment relationship does not mean that Dr. Bonilla did not properly explain the 14 relevant, objective medical evidence to support his opinion, or that his opinion is inconsistent with 15 evidence from other medical sources. The Commissioner cites to Benton v. Barnhart, 331 F.3d 16 1030 (9th Cir. 2003), which held that “duration of treatment relationship and frequency and nature 17 of contact [are] relevant in weighing [a medical source] opinion.” Id. at 1038. However, the issue 18 is not the relevancy of these factors, as they are clearly relevant. The issue is that the ALJ did not 19 explain how she considered the supportability and consistency factors in evaluating Dr. Bonilla’s 20 medical opinion, as she is required to do under the revised 2017 SSA regulations. See Woods, 32 21 F.4th at 792.

22 Nor does the ALJ’s finding that Dr. Bonilla’s opinion is “vague as to the degree of 23 exertional capacity remaining” (ECF No. 12-3 at 31) suggest anything about its supportability or 24 consistency. The fact that Dr. Bonilla did not opine on what type of work C.B. can or cannot not 25 do moving forward does not mean that he failed to provide objective medical evidence to support 26 what he did opine on, which is that in his “professional opinion,” C.B. “meets the clinical criteria” 27 for CFS, the symptoms of which are exacerbated by physical and cognitive exertion. ECF No. 12-28 12 at 19. To the contrary, Dr. Bonilla’s letter is accompanied and informed by a detailed, eight-

1 page initial evaluation where he reviewed C.B.’s medical records, such as her treatment history, 2 symptoms, and objective medical findings, and documented his eighty-minute, in-person
3 examination of C.B. Id. at 10–17. And the lack of detail provided as to C.B.’s exertional capacity 4 remaining does not mean that Dr. Bonilla’s opinion is irreconcilable with the rest of the medical 5 evidence in the record. The ALJ did not cite to any medical evidence as being either consistent or 6 inconsistent with Dr. Bonilla’s opinion.

7 The Commissioner argues that the ALJ “properly highlighted [the fact that] Dr. Bonilla did 8 not opine permanent limitations based on [C.B.’s] condition or limitations for any continuous 12-9 month period, but instead opined temporary restrictions.” ECF No. 24 at 15; see ECF No. 12-12 10 at 19 (recommending that C.B. refrain from any exertion, both physical and cognitive, “[u]ntil her 11 fatigue has measurably improved.”) She cites to Fisher v. Berryhill, 708 F. App’x 384 (9th Cir.
12 2017), an unpublished Ninth Circuit opinion which held that the record supported the ALJ’s 13 “observation that [the doctor’s] opinion does not indicate limitations that would last more than 12 14 months” and therefore was entitled to “little weight.” Id. at 385. However, in Dr. Bonilla’s initial 15 evaluation, he noted C.B.’s “four years history of severe and incapacitated fatigue[],” the fact that 16 her “symptoms exacerbate and [worsen] by physical activities, stress, and overstimulation,” and 17 the fact that she has had “evaluations by multiple health care providers” and “received multiple 18 unsuccessful treatments.” ECF No. 12-12 at 16. These findings do not suggest that Dr. Bonilla 19 opined only temporary restrictions for C.B. Rather, Dr. Bonilla recommended that C.B. “[a]void 20 crash by limiting the actions that will exacerbate” her symptoms, with no indication that this is 21 meant to be only a temporary limitation. Id. To interpret Dr. Bonilla’s statement as opining 22 temporary restrictions just because he made reference to C.B.’s fatigue potentially “measurably 23 improving” is inconsistent with his medical opinion as a whole, as well as with the medical 24 community’s understanding of CFS, specifically, the lack of permanent treatment options. See 25 Reddick, 157 F.3d at 727 (“[T]he CDC has made it clear that no definitive treatment for CFS 26 exists.”) Moreover, the notion that C.B. could experience some improvement as to her CFS and 27 fibromyalgia symptoms “is not inconsistent with disability.” See Trevizo, 871 F.3d at 680.

28 Finally, the ALJ’s statement that Dr. Bonilla “overly rel[ies] upon the subjective complaints” of C.B. “cannot be the rationale for finding evidence not credible when a plaintiff asserts disability based on CFS.” Baig, 2023 WL 3688453, at *10; Reddick, 157 F.3d at 726 (citing definition of CFS in CDC report as “self-reported persistent or relapsing fatigue lasting six or more consecutive months”) (emphasis in original). The ALJ found that the “subjective symptoms” C.B. reported to Dr. Bonilla are inconsistent with her “description of daily activities of living” and “are not probative as to greater limitation since they are not reflected in the overall treatment record and contemporaneous medical treatment notes.” ECF No. 12-3 at 29–30. However, the ALJ did not cite to any treatment notes in the record which are supposedly inconsistent with the symptoms C.B. reported to Dr. Bonilla. More importantly, the Court has already rejected this line of reasoning as to the ALJ’s evaluation of C.B.’s symptom testimony and likewise rejects it as to the ALJ’s evaluation of Dr. Bonilla’s medical opinion. See Baig, 2023 WL 3688453, at *10.

3. Drs. Harris and Sugden

C.B. provided a medical opinion letter from Dr. Harris, co-signed by his colleague Dr. Sugden of Pacific Frontier Medical, Inc. and dated May 24, 2018. ECF No. 12-8 at 2–5. She also provided a fibromyalgia medical opinion form completed by Dr. Harris and dated August 31, 2020. Id. at 505–13. As to the May 2018 letter, the ALJ found that it contained “conclusory statements...not supported by the contemporaneous medical record,” and was “thus not persuasive.” ECF No. 12-3 at 30. She also found that Dr. Sugden’s treatment notes “reflect homeopathic, dietary and supplement remedies with grossly normal physical examination findings and improvements in energy and pain control not requiring frequent or potent treatments or medications.” Id.

As an example of a “conclusory statement,” the ALJ points to Dr. Harris’s opinion that C.B. is “unable to perform the basic and essential duties of her position and thus is unable to work...” Id. at 30. But this is just one sentence towards the end of the last paragraph in Dr. Harris’s letter, which is three and a half pages long. See ECF No. 12-8 at 2–5. In the rest of the letter, Dr. Harris describes many of C.B.’s “presenting” symptoms. Id. at 2. For example, he notes C.B.’s high antibody count and low blood pressure, the latter of which indicates a “clear

1 adrenal deficiency” that could be the cause of her dizziness spells which require her to sit to avoid 2 passing out. Id. at 2, 4. Dr. Harris also states his and Dr. Sugden’s “concerns of continued 3 neurological deficit, that at this time is still coming and going,” because of their physical exam 4 findings documenting weakness in C.B.’s lower leg reflexes. Id. at 2–3. He concludes that 5 although C.B.’s fatigue had improved, she continues to have trouble multitasking, carrying out 6 short and detailed instructions, “deficits with sustaining concentration and attention for both short 7 and long durations,” among other specific limitations. Id.

8 The ALJ did not explain how any of these can be considered “conclusory statements.”
9 According to the Commissioner, Dr. Harris’s opinion that C.B. is “unable to work... encroached 10 upon the sole responsibility of the Commissioner to make that disability determination.” ECF No.
11 24 at 16 (citing Nyman v. Heckler, 779 F.2d 528, 531 (9th Cir. 1985) (“Conclusory opinions by 12 medical experts regarding the ultimate question of disability are not binding on the ALJ.”)) It is 13 true that the ALJ is not required to credit Dr. Harris’s conclusory opinion that C.B. is unable to 14 work. This does not mean, however, that the rest of his findings as to how C.B.’s symptoms are 15 manifesting and affecting her ability to concentrate must be rejected. And although the ALJ found 16 that Dr. Harris’s May 2018 letter is “not supported by the contemporaneous medical record,” she 17 did not cite to any specific medical records that contradict Dr. Harris’s findings. As such, the ALJ 18 once again failed to articulate how she considered the supportability and consistency factors under 19 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c when evaluating Dr. Harris’s medical opinion.

20 The ALJ also rejected Dr. Harris’s May 2018 letter because of the treatment notes from Dr.
21 Sugden, purportedly because they reflect “homeopathic, dietary and supplement remedies” and 22 show C.B. does not require “frequent or potent treatments or medications.” ECF No. 12-3 at 30.
23 To the extent the ALJ is repudiating the alternative medicine remedies prescribed by Dr. Sugden, 24 she did not identify any medical opinions “stating what sort of treatment should be expected for a 25 totally disabled individual suffering from [C.B.’s] impairments, suggesting that the ALJ 26 impermissibly relied on her own, lay medical opinion.” Schultz v. Colvin, 32 F. Supp. 3d 1047, 27 1060 (N.D. Cal. 2014). According to C.B., she has “received all of the treatments and tests 28 commensurate with her diagnoses including antiviral medications, Cymbalta, multiple

1 antidepressants, low-dose naltrexone cardiopulmonary exercise stress test, tilt table testing, and 2 cardiac medications,” and “[n]otably, she had poor tolerance for all fibromyalgia medications.”
3 ECF No. 25 at 5 (citing ECF No. 12-12 at 10).

4 Thus, “[t]he record reflects that [C.B.] consistently sought treatment from both her primary 5 care doctor and from a naturopathic doctor for the recognized symptoms of CFS. The ALJ does 6 not identify a less-conservative treatment option rejected by [C.B.], and there is no indication that 7 further treatment for CFS would be fruitful.” Lee, 2023 WL 2751985, at *4. As explained above, 8 fibromyalgia and CFS symptoms “wax and wane,” so treatment notes that at times document 9 “improvements in energy and pain control” do not necessarily discredit C.B.’s overall complaints 10 to Dr. Sugden of debilitating fatigue. See Trevizo, 871 F.3d at 680.

11 Finally, the ALJ also determined that Dr. Sugden’s treatment notes contained “grossly 12 normal physical examination findings.” ECF No. 12-3 at 30. The treatment notes she cites to 13 indicate that C.B. was “alert and oriented x 3 in no acute distress,” had “regular [heart] rate and 14 rhythm,” and “normal bowel sounds.” ECF No. 12-8 at 11. However, they also note “[d]ark 15 circles under her eyes, pale, and very low energy today,” “pain in muscles in her arm muscles, 16 knees and hip painful,” and “bilateral knee reflexes weakness.” Id. To characterize these as 17 “grossly normal physical examination findings” is misleading and “cherry-picking” Dr. Sugden’s 18 treatment notes instead of reviewing them “in context of the overall diagnostic picture [s]he 19 draws.” See Holohan, 246 F.3d at 1205, 1207.

20 In the August 2020 fibromyalgia medical opinion form, Dr. Harris identifies C.B.’s 21 symptoms and signs of fibromyalgia (ECF No. 12-8 at 505–06) as well as her tender points (id. at 22 507), describes her history with CFS and which impairments have been excluded as a cause for 23 C.B.’s fatigue (id. at 508), notes how abnormal CPET results and “neurally mediated hypotension 24 as shown by tilt table testing” are two laboratory findings that support the CFS diagnosis (id. at 25 510) and opines that C.B. is limited in using her hands, fingers, and arms, and can only use them 5 26 percent of the workday (id. at 512).

27 The ALJ found that Dr. Harris’s medical opinion form is not persuasive because it is 28 “contradicted by the valid neuropsychological testing present in the file and grossly normal mental 1 status evaluation findings throughout the record.” ECF No. 12-3 at 31. But as noted above, the 2 two neuropsychological evaluations from Dr. Yutsis and Dr. Dorsett provide that C.B. has 3 significant cognitive dysfunction, consistent with her CFS diagnosis, such that it disrupts her day-4 to-day life activities. ECF No. 12-8 at 498–99, 518. The ALJ did not explain how they are 5 otherwise inconsistent with Dr. Harris’s findings. And the “grossly normal mental status 6 evaluation findings” from Dr. Lee, C.B.’s treating psychiatrist (ECF No. 12-8 at 31, 93, 99, ECF 7 No. 12-9 at 222, ECF No. 12-10 at 179), are in the context of their psychiatric sessions, where Dr.

8 Lee never purported to evaluate the severity of C.B.’s CFS or fibromyalgia.

9 4. Drs. Hanna and Brodsky

10 C.B. indirectly challenges the ALJ’s evaluation of the prior administrative medical 11 findings from Drs. Hanna and Brodsky, medical consultants for the SSA. C.B. argues that the 12 ALJ impermissibly “played doctor by relying on her own opinion,” in part because she rejected 13 almost all the medical opinions in the record regarding C.B.’s medically determinable 14 impairments. ECF No. 19 at 15. The only medical opinions credited by the ALJ were those of 15 Drs. Hanna and Brodsky, and even then, the ALJ only found the opinions persuasive through May 16 16, 2019, given that they had no knowledge of C.B.’s fibromyalgia and CFS diagnoses and the 17 October 2020 pacemaker implantation. ECF No. 12-3 at 30.

18 Dr. Hanna’s medical evaluation of C.B. occurred on December 24, 2018. ECF No. 12-4 at 19 6–7. Dr. Hanna found that C.B.’s “[s]ubjective limitations [are] not fully supported by 20 longitudinal objective [medical evidence of record]. After review of [medical evidence of record], 21 [client] capable of at least light [RFC]. Fatigue considered.” Id. at 7. Dr. Brodsky’s medical 22 evaluation of C.B. occurred on May 15, 2019. Id. at 22–24. Dr. Brodsky found that his review of 23 the prior and current medical evidence of record did not indicate any “significant changes” in her 24 condition since C.B. was evaluated by Dr. Hanna. Id. at 24.

25 According to the ALJ, the prior administrative medical findings of Drs. Hanna and 26 Brodsky are persuasive through May 2019 “as supported by the combination of medical signs and 27 findings for [C.B.’s] combination of severe and nonsevere physical and mental impairments.”
28 ECF No. 12-3 at 30. Once again, the ALJ did not explain how she considered the supportability

1 and consistency factors under 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520c(c)(1) and (c)(2). In fact, the ALJ provided 2 no more explanation than this one statement. This is not enough to support a finding of 3 persuasiveness. Garrison, 759 F.3d at 1012 (noting that the ALJ satisfies the “substantial 4 evidence” requirement by “setting out a detailed and thorough summary of the facts and 5 conflicting clinical evidence, stating his interpretation thereof, and making findings. The ALJ 6 must do more than state conclusions.”) (quoting Reddick, 157 F.3d at 725).

7 C. Lay Witness Testimony

8 C.B. argues that the ALJ also erred in rejecting the lay witness testimony of her partner, 9 Beth. ECF No. 19 at 15–16. The ALJ found that Beth’s testimony contained “sincere 10 observations” but did not “correlate with [the] contemporaneous medical record such that they 11 persuade as to more limitations than stated in the RFC.” ECF No. 12-3 at 33.

12 “Lay testimony as to a claimant’s symptoms is competent evidence that an ALJ must take 13 into account, unless he or she expressly determines to disregard such testimony and gives reasons 14 germane to each witness for doing so.” Lewis v. Apfel, 236 F.3d 503, 511 (9th Cir. 2001). “One 15 reason for which an ALJ may discount lay testimony is that it conflicts with medical evidence.” 16 Id. In addition, where the ALJ provides “clear and convincing reasons for rejecting [the 17 claimant’s] own subjective complaints,” and the lay witness testimony is “similar to such 18 complaints, it follows that the ALJ also gave germane reasons” for rejecting the lay witness 19 testimony. Valentine v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 574 F.3d 685, 694 (9th Cir. 2009).

20 The Commissioner notes how there is some uncertainty as to whether the “germane 21 reasons” standard survived the 2017 regulatory changes. ECF No. 24 at 20, n.3. Under the new 22 regulations, lay witness testimony falls under the category of “Evidence from nonmedical 23 sources.” 20 C.F.R. § 404.1513(a)(4). There is no regulatory requirement that the ALJs articulate 24 reasons for how they considered evidence from nonmedical sources. See 20 C.F.R.
25 § 404.1520c(d). Although the Ninth Circuit has not addressed the issue, in Alice B. v. Kijakazi, 26 No. 20-CV-05897-DMR, 2021 WL 6113000, (N.D. Cal. Dec. 27, 2021), the court held that the 27 “‘germane’ reasons requirement for evaluating lay witness testimony has always been a different 28 (and lower) standard than that required for evaluating medical opinions,” therefore, “[t]he new

1 regulations providing that lay opinions do not need to be evaluated under the same standards as 2 medical opinions is...consistent with the Ninth Circuit's germane reasons standard." Id. at *8.

3 In S.M. v. Saul, No. 20-CV-05304-SVK, 2022 WL 958379, (N.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2022), the 4 court cited Alice B. favorably, but ultimately did not "resolve any latent disagreement on this 5 point" because "the Commissioner has briefed this case under the assumption that the germane 6 reasons case law continues to apply." Id. at *7. Despite the footnote, the Commissioner also 7 briefs the issue of Beth's lay witness testimony under the "germane reasons" standard. ECF No.
8 24 at 19-20. Because the Ninth Circuit's "germane reasons" standard is not inconsistent with the 9 revised 2017 regulatory scheme, and the Commissioner has briefed the issue applying that 10 standard, the Court will proceed in evaluating the issue of Beth's testimony under the "germane 11 reasons" framework.

12 The Commissioner argues that "the ALJ provided proper reasons for discounting [C.B.'s] 13 own testimony, thus providing a sufficient basis for rejecting third-party statements from her 14 partner as well." ECF No. 24 at 19 (citing Valentine, 574 F.3d at 694). However, the ALJ did not 15 cite to C.B.'s symptom testimony as a reason for rejecting Beth's testimony. ECF No. 12-3 at 33.
16 Even if she had, the Court already held that the ALJ did not provide "clear and convincing 17 reasons" for rejecting C.B.'s symptom testimony. Accordingly, those reasons cannot be a 18 "sufficient basis" for rejecting Beth's testimony as well. See Alice B., 2021 WL 6113000, at *8 19 ("Because the court finds that the ALJ's reasons for rejecting [the p]laintiff's testimony were not 20 supported by substantial evidence, the court cannot apply those reasons to [the p]laintiff's 21 mother's testimony to find the error harmless.") The ALJ simply stated that Beth's "statements do 22 not correlate with the contemporaneous medical record..." ECF No. 12-3 at 33. But she did not 23 cite to any medical record evidence or explain where the inconsistency lies. See Stout v. Comm'r, 24 Soc. Sec. Admin., 454 F.3d 1050, 1054 (9th Cir. 2006) ("[T]he ALJ...is required to provide 25 specific reasons for rejecting lay testimony.") Therefore, the ALJ did not otherwise provide any 26 other "germane" reason for discounting Beth's testimony.

27 D. Step Five Findings

28 At step five of the five-step sequential evaluation process, the burden shifts to the

1 Commissioner to show that the claimant has the residual functional capacity (RFC) to perform
2 other work that exists in significant numbers in the national economy. Hoopai, 499 F.3d at 1074.
3 The Commissioner can meet this burden “by the testimony of a vocational expert...” Tackett v.
4 Apfel, 180 F.3d 1094, 1101 (9th Cir. 1999). “At step five, the ALJ can call upon a vocational 5 expert to testify as to: (1) what jobs the claimant, given his or her [RFC], would be able to do; and 6 (2) the availability of such jobs in the national economy. At the hearing, the ALJ poses 7 hypothetical questions to the vocational expert that ‘set out all of the claimant’s impairments’ for 8 the vocational expert’s consideration.” Id. An ALJ is “only required to accept those limitations 9 she decide[s] are applicable,” and she is “free to accept or reject restrictions in a hypothetical 10 question that are not supported by substantial evidence.” Denman Thompson v. Colvin, No. 13-11 CV-04242-NJV, 2014 WL 12487664, at *10 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 2014) (quoting Osenbrock v.
12 Apfel, 240 F.3d 1157, 1164–65 (9th Cir. 2001)).

13 Here, C.B. challenges the ALJ’s determination at step five that she can perform sedentary, 14 unskilled work. ECF No. 19 at 22–23. The ALJ refused to adopt in her RFC finding the work 15 restrictions proposed by Drs. Bonilla, Harris, Snell, and Sugden, specifically, their opinion that 16 C.B. cannot engage in regular and sustained work activity because her post-exertional malaise 17 would require her to be frequently off task. ECF No. 12-3 at 29–31, 82. Instead, the ALJ found 18 that C.B. has the RFC to perform unskilled, “sedentary” work, consisting in part of “the ability to 19 lift/carry up to 10 pounds occasionally, and 5 pounds frequently,” “stand and walk up to 2 hours 20 cumulatively in an 8-hour workday,” and “understand, remember, and complete 3-4 step, routine, 21 but not complex tasks.” Id. at 25–26. At the hearing, the ALJ posed three hypothetical questions 22 to the vocational expert. ECF No. 12-3 at 73–79. The second hypothetical question concerned the 23 jobs available to an individual with all the limitations from C.B.’s RFC. Id. at 78. The vocational 24 expert testified that such a person can perform the requirements of “unskilled” and “sedentary” 25 occupations including lens gauger, addresser, and circuit board assembler. Id. The third 26 hypothetical question concerned the jobs available to an individual with C.B.’s RFC with the 27 additional limitation that the individual would be off task 20 percent of the workday, a restriction
28 detailed in the medical source opinions provided by C.B. Id. at 79. The vocational expert testified

1 that such an individual would be unemployable. Id.

2 C.B. argues that “Drs. Bonilla, Harris, Snell, and Sugden all opined that [she] could not 3 complete a normal workday or workweek” and that the vocational expert “testified that a person 4 who would be off task 20% of the workday would be unemployable.” ECF No. 19 at 23. The 5 Commissioner’s response to this argument is that the hypothetical question which was ultimately 6 credited and accepted as true by the ALJ, hypothetical question number two, only included 7 “limitations that the ALJ found were supported by substantial evidence.” ECF No. 24 at 21. That 8 is to say, the ALJ was not required to accept the vocational expert’s testimony in response to 9 hypothetical question number three, since the ALJ determined that the additional limitation of 10 being off task 20 percent of the workday was not supported for C.B. by the medical evidence of 11 record. Id.

12 As detailed above, the Court found that the ALJ’s refusal to credit the medical opinions of 13 Drs. Bonilla, Harris, Snell, and Sugden was not supported by substantial evidence. It is because of 14 the ALJ’s rejection of these medical opinions that she accepted the vocational expert’s testimony 15 in response to hypothetical number two as to an individual with C.B.’s RFC being able to perform 16 sedentary, unskilled work, over his testimony in response to hypothetical number three that an off-17 task individual for up to 20 percent of the workday would be unemployable “[I]f an ALJ’s 18 hypothetical is based on a [RFC] assessment that does not include some of the claimant’s 19 limitations, the vocational expert’s testimony has no evidentiary value.” Ghanim v. Colvin, 763 20 F.3d 1154, 1166 (9th Cir. 2014) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); see also Embrey 21 v. Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 422 (9th Cir. 1988) (“Hypothetical questions posed to the vocational 22 expert must set out all the limitations and restrictions of the particular claimant.”) Given the 23 ALJ’s error as to the medical opinion evidence, it is possible that hypothetical question number 24 two, the hypothetical with C.B.’s RFC and the one ultimately accepted by the ALJ, did not include 25 all of C.B.’s limitations.

26 In Ruben A. v. Saul, No. 19-CV-03893-EMC, 2020 WL 1897578 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 16, 27 2020), the court found that the ALJ erred in discounting a treating doctor’s medical opinion, which 28 in turn had a “material impact on the [vocational expert]’s testimony.” Id. at *6. The treating

1 doctor opined that the plaintiff could sit with appropriate breaks for four hours during an eight-2 hour workday, while the ALJ's hypothetical involved an individual who could sit six hours in an 3 eight-hour workday. Id. at *5–6. The court held that it could not “confidently conclude that the 4 outcome would have been the same absent this error because the ALJ’s determination was based 5 on the [vocational expert]’s testimony, which in turn was based on the incomplete hypothetical.” 6 Id. at *6 (quoting Brown v. Berryhill, No. 16-CV-04022-EMC, 2017 WL 4417516, at *9 (N.D.
7 Cal. Oct. 4, 2017)). Because the ALJ’s findings as to the medical opinions of Drs. Bonilla, Harris, 8 Snell, and Sugden were not supported by substantial evidence, the Court cannot confidently 9 conclude that the vocational expert testimony in response to hypothetical question number two, 10 which did not include the limitations these doctors opined, is not likewise incomplete. Given all 11 the above, the Court finds that remand is appropriate on these grounds for the ALJ to make her 12 step-five determination after properly evaluating the medical opinion evidence in the record.

13 E. Appeals Council’s Consideration of the September 2020 Letter from Dr. Snell

14 Finally, C.B. argues that “[t]he Appeals Council’s failure to consider the new and material 15 evidence submitted in accordance with 20 C.F.R § 404.970(b) constituted legal error.” ECF No.
16 19 at 21. The “new and material evidence” is a letter from Dr. Snell, dated September 14, 2020, 17 written in response to an “inaccurate” medical review performed by Dr. Kristal Bright, M.D. for 18 C.B.’s long-term disability insurance carrier. Id. When the Appeals Council denied review, on 19 August 19, 2022, it found that the letter did not “show a reasonable probability that it would 20 change the outcome of the decision.” ECF No. 12-3 at 3. The Appeals Council did “not exhibit 21 this evidence,” meaning that Dr. Snell’s letter is not part of the administrative record lodged by the 22 Commissioner in this case.⁵ Id.

23 The Appeals Council “will review a case if … [it] receives additional evidence that is new, 24

⁵ C.B. informed the Court that the Dr. Snell letter was not part of the administrative record in her 26 Motion for Summary Judgment when she attached a “Motion to Supplement the Record” along 27 with the only copy of the letter on the Court’s docket. ECF No. 19-1. The Court denied the 28 “motion” without prejudice because of C.B.’s failure to file it as a separate motion, as well as her failure to attach a proposed order and proper supporting declaration as required by the Local Rules. ECF No. 20. The Court gave C.B. another opportunity to file her “motion,” but she chose to not renew her request to supplement the record.

1 material, and relates to the period on or before the date of the hearing decision, [] there is a 2 reasonable probability that the additional evidence would change the outcome of the decision,” 3 and there is “good cause” for not submitting the new evidence earlier. 20 C.F.R. § 404.970(a)(5), 4 (b). “Where the Appeals Council was required to consider additional evidence, but failed to do so, 5 remand to the ALJ is appropriate so that the ALJ can reconsider its decision in light of the 6 additional evidence.” Taylor v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 659 F.3d 1228, 1233 (9th Cir. 2011).
7 “A claimant has the burden to demonstrate the evidence should have been considered by the 8 Appeals Council” under the SSA’s regulations. Garcia v. Saul, No. 1:19-CV-1103-JLT, 2021 WL 9 223205, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 22, 2021). However, if the Appeals Council does consider new 10 evidence submitted by the claimant in denying review of the ALJ’s decision, “the new evidence is 11 part of the administrative record, which the district court must consider in determining whether the 12 Commissioner’s decision is supported by substantial evidence.” Brewes v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec.
13 Admin., 682 F.3d 1157, 1159–60 (9th Cir. 2012).

14 C.B.’s challenge assumes that the Appeals Council did not consider the September 2020 15 letter from Dr. Snell. However, courts in the Ninth Circuit have recognized a difference between 16 evidence that the Appeals Council “considered” and evidence the Appeals Council merely “looked 17 at,” in determining whether the additional evidence should be incorporated into the administrative 18 record and be subject to judicial review. See, e.g., Victor A. v. Kijakazi, No. 2:21-CV-07482-GJS, 19 2023 WL 2614510, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 23, 2023). “[I]f ‘the Appeals Council only looked at the 20 evidence ... the new evidence [does] not become part of the record’ and the Court ‘may not 21 consider it.’” Id. (quoting Amor v. Berryhill, 743 F. App’x 145, 146 (9th Cir. 2018)).

22 In Victor, the Appeals Council used the exact same language it used in this case when 23 denying the plaintiff’s request for review based on new medical records submitted. 2023 WL 24 2614510, at *3 (“We find this evidence does not show a reasonable probability that it would 25 change the outcome of the decision. We did not exhibit this evidence.”) The district court held 26 that the Appeals Council had “looked” at but not “consider[ed]” the new medical records. Id.; see also Guzman v. Kijakazi, No. 1:20-CV-0514 JLT, 2021 WL 6062645, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 22, 27 2021) (interpreting Appeals Council statement that it “did not exhibit this evidence” to mean it

1 “did not consider the evidence but merely looked at it.”) The Ninth Circuit in Amor also found 2 that the Appeals Council only “looked” at the new evidence in part because it determined that the 3 evidence did not meet the standard for consideration, therefore, “the new evidence did not become 4 part of the record, and we may not consider it.” 743 F. App’x. at 146.

5 On the other hand, Amor is an unpublished Ninth Circuit case, and courts in this District
6 have previously held that new evidence before the Appeals Council “is part of the record the Court 7 must consider in determining whether the ALJ’s decision is supported by substantial evidence.”
8 Linnehan v. Berryhill, No. 17-CV-04146-JSC, 2018 WL 6267846, at *8 (N.D. Cal. July 31, 2018).
9 In Linnehan, the plaintiff submitted several documents, including medical records, to the Appeals 10 Council, and the Appeals Council decision likewise stated, “[w]e find this evidence does not show 11 a reasonable probability that it would change the outcome of the decision. We did not consider and 12 exhibit this evidence.” Id. at *7. The court cited Brewes in support of the proposition that “the 13 Appeals Council cannot consider the evidence to conclude that it ‘does not show a reasonable 14 probability that it would change the outcome of the decision’ and then exclude the evidence from 15 the record based on the illogical conclusion that ‘[w]e did not consider and exhibit this evidence.’
16 Id. at *8 (citation omitted).

17 Neither the Commissioner nor C.B. address the issue of whether it was proper for the 18 Appeals Council to forego exhibiting Dr. Snell’s September 2020 letter or whether the Appeals 19 Council did in fact “consider” the letter as required by SSA regulations. Because the Appeals 20 Council concluded that Dr. Snell’s letter did not “show a reasonable probability that it would 21 change the outcome” of the ALJ’s decision, and denied review, the Court finds that the Appeals 22 Council did “consider” the letter. See Linnehan, 2018 WL 6267846, at *8. Thus, the Court 23 incorporates Dr. Snell’s letter into the administrative record and is bound to consider it in 24 determining whether the Commissioner’s decision is supported by substantial evidence. See 25 Brewes, 682 F.3d at 1159–60.

26 In terms of the substance of the letter, C.B. argues that Dr. Snell “explains in detail why a 27 2-day [CPET] could indicate significant functional impairments while a single treadmill test 28 would not.” ECF No. 19 at 22. Dr. Snell also explains “the nature of [postexertional] malaise,”

1 how it makes CFS difficult to diagnose, and how following the 2-day [CPET], C.B. “experienced 2 profound fatigue despite significant rest,” “widespread aches and pain,” and “was not recovered 7
3 days post-testing.” Id. The Commissioner notes that all these findings are covered in Dr. Snell’s 4 January 2021 letter and the CPET Evaluation Report, both of which were in the record before the 5 ALJ. ECF No. 24 at 23; see ECF No. 12-16 at 22–33. That is, Dr. Snell compares the CPET to an 6 exercise treadmill test (ECF No. 12-16 at 22–23), explains how some patients with CFS may not 7 be “obviously ill-appearing during clinical evaluations,” (id. at 24) and makes the exact same 8 findings as to C.B.’s symptoms post-testing in the CPET Evaluation Report. Id. at 30. The Court
9 held above that the ALJ’s findings as to Dr. Snell’s January 2021 letter and CPET Evaluation
10 Report are not supported by substantial evidence in part because of the ALJ’s failure to address 11 these exact points when evaluating their consistency with the rest of the medical evidence of 12 record. Dr. Snell’s September 2020 letter does not affect the Court’s determination either way.

13 IV. CONCLUSION

14 For the reasons stated above, the Court GRANTS Plaintiff’s Motion for Summary 15 Judgment and DENIES Defendant’s Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, and REMANDS for 16 further proceedings consistent with this Order.
